A rhetorical analysis of The Declaration of Independence:

IN CONGRESS, July 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When, in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. -- That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. -- That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. -- Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good. He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harrass our people, and eat out their substance.
He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures.
He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power.
He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:
For Quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:
For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:
For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:
For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:
For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury:
For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences.
For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:
For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:
For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.
He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.
He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.
He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.
He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.
In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.
Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which, would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.
Please read the Declaration completely before addressing the points and questions listed below. Peruse them before your second reading to help guide your annotations. Please pay special attention to the terms in bold; you will encounter them again. Be prepared to answer any one of these questions either in a timed setting in class or in a typed response on your own. Each question you are asked to answer will count either as an individual quiz grade or as part of a test grade.

1. A cumulative or loose sentence adds its modifying elements after the subject, verb, and complement; whereas a periodic sentence expresses its modifying elements first, reserving the main point until the end. The first paragraph of the Declaration consists of one lengthy sentence. Which type of sentence is it? Why is this type of sentence effective in this case?

2. Describe the tone of the first paragraph. Why do the authors avoid specifying the conflict between Britain and the Americans – referring instead to “one People” dissolving political this with “another”? What is the antecedent of the pronouns “they” and “them”? Consider the implications of the words “necessary” and “declare” as well as the diction related to humankind and spirituality. How does this opening paragraph convey the nature of the Americans’ motivation for independence?

3. Even though they are not specified, how and why does the first paragraph establish a clear separation between the Americans and the British?

4. The second section, the preamble (ending with “…their future Security.”), also does not specify the conflict between Britain and America. Describe the tone. Specify diction that helps create the tone. Why don’t they mention the conflict yet?

5. In the first two sections, the only sentence written with a pronoun in first person is the first sentence of section two, “We hold these Truths…” The rest of the sentences have third person subjects and objects. To whom does “we” refer?

6. Why are the first two sections primarily written in third-person point of view?

7. Note the “Facts” in your text, which are listed in a rather lengthy paragraph. Why would the authors of the Declaration feel the need to “prove this” by providing “Facts”? What is the antecedent of the pronoun “this”? What is meant by a “candid world”? Why do they introduce the grievances with a short periodic sentence? Why use passive voice, obscuring the subject? In other words, why not specify who is going to submit these acts”?

8. Note examples of the three Aristotelian appeals in the document. Which type of appeal is most prominent? Why is reliance on this type important?

9. Even though the Declaration conveys arguments, it is essentially non-persuasive because it does not explicitly require anyone to act. If the document were persuasive, explain the differences. Would it be as effective. Since the Declaration is not persuasive, what is its purpose, both stated and implied?

10. Believe it or not, “complacent colonists,” the uninspired colonist content with British rule, existed during the Revolutionary Period. This complacent colonist represents a significant segment of American society during the time of the Revolutionary War. How does the Declaration address this audience?
The Declaration is an argument presented in the form of deductive reasoning, where a conclusion is drawn from the premises, moving from the general to the specific. If parts 2 through 5 were expressed in the form of a deductive argument, a syllogism, it might be expressed:

Major Premise:

Minor Premise:

Conclusion:

Therefore, the American people have the right and duty to

Inductive reasoning moves from the specific to the general, relying on evidence to reach its conclusion; therefore, the reliability of the conclusion is based on the validity of the evidence. We will discuss this in more depth later this semester.
